Event The Brinton 101 - Small Works Show
Dates October 27 to December 22
Program Artists' Reception, October 27, from 3 to 5 PM

The Brinton Museum (Big Horn, WY) (August 26, 2019) The Brinton Museum's 2019 small works show, The Brinton 101, opens in the Jacomien Mars Reception Gallery and the S. K. Johnston, Jr. Family Gallery in October with a reception to meet the artists on Sunday, October 27th. Sunday's program is free and open to the public. This exhibit continues through December 22nd.

This year's show includes more than one hundred talented artists from throughout the U.S. working in a variety of mediums and styles. The small works show is popular with patrons and clients for its diversity and its affordability as well as outstanding fine art. In meeting the challenge of creating pieces in a small format, the artists are, in some instances, working outside their typical format. The result is a show that includes art that is familiar to collectors and also works that are excitingly 'new'. An online catalog of the show will be available on The Brinton's website.

This exhibit is made possible by generous contributions from the Edwin T. Meredith Foundation, the Richard Hammer Trust and The Tucker Foundation.

About The Brinton Museum Founded in 1960, The Brinton Museum is a multi-faceted, fine arts institution devoted to preserving the art and history of the West.
